Quotes of the Month

"If we do not lift up women and families, everyone will fall short."

Women, Life, Freedom.

By: Majid Ahmadi Khoshbakht

Gender discrimination has involved all societies from the past to today. Differences keep women away from their basic and advanced rights.

The process of empathy in complex social issues plays an important role in solving them correctly, intelligently, and sustainably.

Correctly understanding the root of social problems and arriving at a specific problem paves the way for a solution.

In societies where one side of this equation is not willing to talk and reach a common solution, violence becomes far more than normal social conditions.

Governments that rule based on a specific and patriarchal ideology are the hardest to reach the right solution in the direction of eliminating gender discrimination.

On the other side of the equation are women who offer a different solution against autocratic governments.

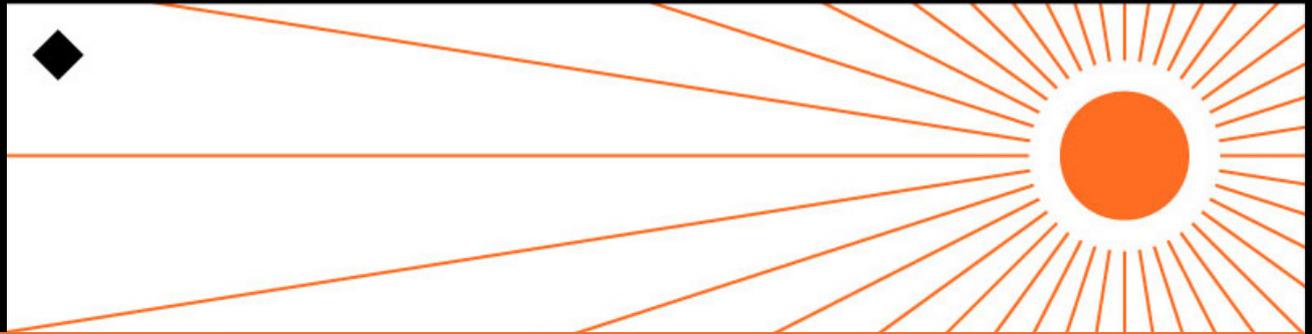

A path that imposes far more costs.

But in this way, their determination and seriousness will multiply and in the end, the authority will bear a bigger cost.

A penalty for the loss of domestic and global legitimacy.

Even at the cost of losing power.

Finally, the sun of victory will shine in the world in order to achieve gender equality and freedom.
